Hi Lindsey,

Thank you for the response. We will file this email for the record.

Also, just want to confirm that you meant to say “no” jeopardy regarding our determination on the two Proposed species? Let me know.

Thanks!

dave

Dave,

It is not necessary to reinitiate consultation if 1) the amount or extent of take is exceeded (not applicable here), 2) new info reveals effects of the action that may affect the species in a manner or to extent not previously analyzed (not applicable here), 3) modification of the action causing effects not previously analyzed (not applicable here), or 4) new species is listed or CH is designated that was not previously considered (not applicable here). Therefore, there is no need to re-initiate consultation for the NLEB status change.

The only new requirement is for you to make a jeopardy determination for Alligator Snapping Turtle and Tricolored Bat, which you have done and place that in your files for the record.

Thanks,

Hi Lindsey,

The Surface Transportation Board's Office of Environmental Analysis (OEA) is re-initiating consultation for the above referenced project to address the reclassification of the northern long-eared bat (as endangered). In coordination with OEA as their third-party contractor, we have prepared the consultation re-initiation letter (attached). Please let me know if you have any questions.

Thanks!

Dave
