Washington, DC 20423-0001Re: CSX Transportation, Inc. v. Norfolk Southern Corporation and Norfolk
Southern Railway Company, NOR 42183
Response to CSX Transportation, Inc.'s Motion for Protective Order

Dear Ms. Brown:

On May 20, 2025, CSX Transportation, Inc. ("CSXT") filed a Motion for Protective Order ("Motion") with the Surface Transportation Board (the "Board") in the above-referenced proceeding to protect confidential and commercially sensitive information contained within CSXT's concurrently filed Complaint against Defendants Norfolk Southern Corporation and Norfolk Southern Railway Company (collectively, "NS") from public disclosure.

NS, as Defendants in the above-referenced proceeding, have reviewed CSXT's proposed protective order, attached as Appendix A to CSXT's Motion, and NS concurs but notes one exception. NS notes that in its proposed protective order, CSXT does not provide any instructions or protocols relating to when a party inadvertently produces or discloses material or information, that should have been designated to a higher degree of confidentiality, or that should have been protected by the attorney-client privilege, work product doctrine, or any other privilege. It has been NS's experience that such protocols are normally contained in Protective Orders. However, this lack of instructions or protocols could be addressed by either party in a transmittal letter to any discovery responses by reserving the right to amend confidentiality levels or correct the unintentional production of any document, including data, protected by an evidentiary privilege.

Accordingly, notwithstanding the above-stated exception, NS does not object to the Board entering the protective order with the stipulation that it not solely be limited to CSXT's
