as I review the Great Lakes Basin application what comes to mind is that this company should be call the Great Lies Boondoggle. There is just so much unverifiable and suspect information in the application. They have no balance sheet, no construction estimates from outside companies, no commitments from any company to use it, no financing in place, no experience as Senior Leadership, and no current operations in place to show they have the ability to run as successful business. The few sources they provide can be contradicted and they have expressed no understanding of how freight traffic is changing. We do not need a project from the 1800s to solve the problems of today. There is a reason no existing railroad has proposed this project and why in the last over 100 years since it was first suggested that it has not been built it is a BAD project.
