My father fought in World War One, he was a Doctor and saved countless lives. He is an American hero, it is a shame the legacy farm he fought to protect is now in danger of becoming home to an unneeded new rail line. The Great Lakes Basin project threatens hundreds of legacy farms like mine, farms that contain the blood and sweat of our ancestors, land that has been called home for over 100 years. To the public in the rural areas these farms are more than just a field, they are part of the fabric of the area. people give directions by them, they have roads named after them, they are the heart of the community. They show that this is an area that is so nice families have stay for generations, great-great-great grandchildren are now planting the seeds in the ground their ancestors cleared by hand. The barns may no longer contain horses, but the name and founding date of the family remains on the outside of them. We can not allow these places to become yet another rail line. The public is not served by losing their landmarks, their neighbors, and their ancestral homes. I am imploring you to put history before the profits of a private, no experience, company. we need to preserve our farms, they are after all what our nation was founded on.
