My husband and I were just told that if this Canadian company was to buy th EJ&E railroad tracks that run along Remington Crossing it could mean up to 25 additional freight trains a day that go by. We really hope that this does not happen. The trains are so loud that they wake us up in the middle of the night every time they go by. There is also a lot of subdivisions on my side of the tracks and no matter what way you take to get home you have to go over those tracks. If there's going to be more trains during the day then traffic is going to end up being backed up all the time waiting on all the additional trains. Not to mention what this is going to do to our property value. The housing market is terrible as it is so we don't need this to make it even worse.
