I understand that CN has a business objective, obviously less on the impact to current rail traffic. - moving through various suburbs of the city. I also have a community view & have concern how there's gains ~~then~~ benefit the communities being effected

- how is CN going to aid regional/local economies? locally more business & community
- what are they doing for all communities along the new proposed traffic increase.
- is CN going to ~~pass~~ share the economic benefit (of CN) for improving roads, bridges to those areas impacted by traffic.
- we have a new fire station in Bartlett that would be less useful if more trains pass through & if the trains are longer.
- study will probably be done with current traffic. Is there a vision for the future, many of the communities west of these rails are growing. aren't we going to re-visit this problem 10-20 years from now?
